Chris Adkins-Lamb named Chief Development Officer – Air Force Museum Foundation

Dayton, Ohio – (April 4, 2018) – The Air Force Museum Foundation has announced the appointment of Chris Adkins-Lamb as the new Chief Development Officer of the Air Force Museum Foundation. Adkins-Lamb will assume his new role on 23 April 2018. Before his appointment at the Foundation, Adkins-Lamb served as the Director of Major Gifts for the College of Science and Mathematics at Wright State University in Dayton, OH.

Adkins-Lamb will be responsible for fostering a culture of philanthropy throughout the organization. He will work with the Foundation’s Development Team, Board of Trustees, staff, members, partners and volunteers to build on existing fundraising capabilities that benefit the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force™.

“The Foundation’s mission is to raise funds and awareness to help support the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force,” stated Michael Imhoff, Executive Director of the Air Force Museum Foundation. He continued, “The Chief Development Officer plays a crucial role in our ability to fulfill that mission. After an exhaustive national search, we are pleased to have found Chris right here in our own backyard. Chris brings a unique combination of skills, expertise, and a personal connection to the Air Force. He will be a tremendous asset to the Foundation.”

“I’ve been fortunate to work with remarkable professionals at incredible institutions throughout my career. The chance to join the Air Force Museum Foundation team is more than wonderful career opportunity; for me, it is a true honor professionally and personally.” said Adkins-Lamb. “The National Museum of the U.S. Air Force is a national treasure with international appeal. It’s someplace everyone should have the opportunity to visit. I look forward to helping the Foundation enhance existing relationships and establish new collaborations with donors, friends, and corporate partners to support this historical, educational and inspiring venue.”
